HISTORY

The ABC was inaugurated in 1932 by then Prime Minister Joseph Lyons. Twelve radio stations were brought together under the banner of the Australian Broadcasting Commission.

> Until 1935 all programs went to air live. Over half the early programs were music and in 1936 the ABC began establishing studio broadcasting orchestras in all States. These provided the foundation for the state symphony orchestras which 1990s the late in progressively became independent subsidiary companies of the ABC.

In 1947 the ABC established its own independent news service and in 1950 Radio Australia finally came under full control of the ABC. In 1956 ABC Television began transmission in Sydney and Melbourne. In 1965 the ABC logo came into use, in 1974 the first ABC shop opened and in 1983 the ABC became a Corporation. From 1985 ABC Television could transmit programs nationally via the Aussat satellite and in 1995 the ABC's Multi Media (now New Media and Digital Services) division was established.

THE PRODUCT

ABC TV programs continue to win viewer and critical acclaim with the highest ever free-to-air audience share. Programs of all genres are also winning major peer-voted national and international awards. Free to air commercial channels vie to acquire concepts, programs and personalities pioneered by ABC TV.

Stories broken by programs such as Four Corners, Australian Story and Andrew Denton's Enough Rope regularly receive major press exposure. Characters from some ABCTV programs such as Mother and Son, SeaChange, Bananas in Pyjamas and Kath & Kim have become Australian icons. Three generations of Australians know the words to the Play School song.

ABC Radio National plays a unique role in the Australian radio market, with specialist information programs that touch on every aspect of life including health, politics, religion, science and the arts — giving a breadth of ideas and analysis. A number of the network's programs including The Science Show and Singers of Renown have enjoyed record-breaking longevity, maintaining audience interest over many years.

ABC Classic FM, Australia's only national classical music station offers an eclectic mix of music and music information. The network plays a key role in fostering the work of Australian composers and performers as well as bringing Australians concert performances from around the world.

The ABC's youth network triple j targets an audience of 18-24 year olds. The network gives significant support to new Australian music with a playlist that is more than 40 per cent Australian. Its programs explore issues of interest and concern to young Australians.
